In the inquiry—Which is the best Liniment for Man and Beast?—this is the answer, attested by two generations: the MEXICAN MUSTANG LINIMENT. The reason is simple. It penetrates every sore, wound, or lameness, to the very bone, and drives out all inflammatory and morbid matter. It "goes to the root" of the trouble, and never fails to cure in double quick time.

AYER'S Hair Vigor cures baldness. Hair Vigor restores youthful freshness and color to faded and gray hair. It attains these results by the stimulation of the hair roots and color glands. It rejuvenates the HAIR and cleanses it. It restores to the HAIR that, either by reason of age or diseases of the scalp, has become dry, harsh and brittle, a pliancy and glossy silken softness of extreme beauty. There is no dye in Ayer's Hair VIGOR and the good it does is by the "Pacific" brand of very best steel all sizes at lowest market rates. It imparts to the follicles, and the cleanliness and healthfulness of the condition in which it maintains the scalp.

AYER'S Hair Vigor renews the hair. Hair Vigor is the best cure known for Brashy Hair, Scald Head, Itching Humors, Tetter Sores, Torpid Follicles, and all other diseases of the scalp that cause the falling of the HAIR and its fading. Nothing cleanses of the nuisance of dandruff so perfectly, and so effectually prevents its return, as AYER'S HAIR VIGOR. In addition to the curative and restorative virtues peculiar to Ayer's Hair VIGOR it is a toilet luxury. The Hair is by far the cleanliest hair-dressing made. It causes the hair to grow thick and long, and keeps it always soft and glossy.

Ayer's Hair Vigor

Contains no deleterious ingredients. Its use prevents all scalp disease, secures against the hair growing thin or gray, and surely cures all baldness that is not organic.

PERSONAL AND IMPERSONAL.

—From an estimate made by Miss Kate Field, it appears that Brigham Young has now over fifteen hundred living descendants.

—The champion checker player of the world is said to be a deaf mute, James Wylie, a Scotchman. He is now sixty years old, and has done nothing but play checkers since his fifteenth year.

—Victor Hugo, although over eighty years of age, is said to have the "teeth of a wolf and the stomach of a lion." He has as many hairs on his head as when he was one and twenty, only they are white.

—Governor Adams, of Nevada, happened to overhaul an old coat the other day and found three thousand six hundred and eighty dollars in one of the pockets. He had forgotten all about the money.

—P. T. Barnum thinks that Joyce Heth, the spurious nurse of Washington, was the foundation of his fortune. He was extremely poor, hardly able to earn his bread, when, having bought her for $1,000, borrowed money, he cleared $100,000 for exhibiting her.—N. Y. Tribune.

—Judge David S. Terry, who killed David C. Broderick in a duel in San Francisco, which created such a sensation a quarter of a century ago, killed himself politically with the same bullet. He has not been heard of for a great while, and was generally thought to be dead. But he is alive at Stockton, Cal., where he still practices law, and dwells in the shade of enforced retirement. He is now nearly seventy years old.—Chicago Journal.

—Lord Wolseley was stationed at Montreal twenty years ago, and was very popular with the ladies. His old French instructor there relates this incident: "Once I said to him, quite prophetically, as it turned out: 'Colonel, I believe you will some day rise to be Commander of the English army!' I remember his answer. He said: 'How can I ever hope for promotion when I have no one interested in me at court?' At Montreal, however, Prince Arthur was then a Lieutenant, and between him and Wolseley a warm friendship sprang up. It was probably due to this intimacy, in a measure at least, that he was subsequently appointed Colonel of the Life Guard at London."—Boston Journal.

—The lately deceased millionaire, Mr. Burnham, who was to have married Miss Sanborn, had planned for a happy life of years longer. He gave, says a correspondent, "a handsome diamond ring to that lady that cost not less than five hundred dollars, and said: 'This is a makeshift for an engagement ring. I will give you a better one as soon as we can select it.' And he planned for ten thousand dollars worth of trinkets for her ears, and neck, and hair. And he said: 'You can have that big mahogany table in the library to write on, and we will have those two new books of yours published, you ambitious girl! And our home will [illegible] to buy to save [illegible]yself, and caught at a box covered with cloth. Through the cloth [illegible] could feel something round, like [illegible]ttles. I hung from the box, [illegible]ile the flames came up from be[illegible]w and lapped around my feet. I [illegible]not tell how long I held on; but [illegible]last the agony became too hor[illegible]ble to endure. I tried to call for [illegible]mebody to turn a stream of [illegible]ter on me, but could hardly ut[illegible]a sound. I was being slowly [illegible]rned alive, and determined to [illegible]" Binghamton Republican.

—"Look here, Mr. Consumer, every time I go to your house to read your gasmeter, that infernal dog of yours pitches at me." "Yes, he's a capital watch dog. Sagacious, too. Knows a robber at first sight every time."—N. Y. Sun.

—A sad tale:

There was a little man
And he had a little can,
And a quart or more of kerosene was in it;
And upon the kitchen fire,
To make it burn still higher,
He poured the oil, and in much less than a quarter of a minute
There was no little can,
There was no little man—
The tale's too sad—I can't go on—O! Why did I begin it.

—Detroit Free Press.

—There is a sign on an up-town millinery store which reads: "Call and see our kids." A man dropped in and said to the proprietor, "I saw your sign to 'come in and see the kids.' I've got a pair at home, and I thought I would call in and see if your's were better looking than mine. How many have you?" The proprietor sternly interrupted him: "You fool! I mean gloves, not boys."—Kingston Freeman.

—"There is something that has preyed heavily on my mind ever since our engagement, dear," he said, "but I am almost afraid to tell you of it." "What is it, George?" the young woman asked, anxiously. "I am a somnambulist." "Oh, is that all?" she exclaimed, with a sigh of relief. "I have always been a Universalist myself, but of course when we are made one I shall expect to attend your church."—N. Y. Times.

—One of the boarders at a New London hostelry, while at dinner to-day, attempted to enliven the table by recounting an anecdote. Commencing he said: "I struck a lady with the rheumatism this morning—" "The man ought to be hanged who would strike a lady with the rheumatism," interrupted a voice from the other side of the table. The person who had the story to tell looked around, became confused and collapsed.—Hartford Courant.

—Educational Item: A gentleman who was visiting one of the public schools in a Texas town, asked a bright-looking boy: "What profit is there is the study of ancient history?" "About fifty cents, I reckon," was the reply. "What!" "Well, the teacher makes us buy the books of him, and we have to pay a dollar. I think he gits them for fifty cents a piece; so he has a clear profit of fifty cents, according to my calculation." The boy went home at recess, hence he could not comply with the request of the teacher to stay in after school.—Texas Siftings.

A Big Geography Lesson.

["Gath" in Cincinnati Enquirer.]

The war, indeed, was a mighty school of geography. Without it we never could have understood the dimensions and relations of our own country. The railroad engineer had but imperfectly done his work; the provincial condition of our state governments rejoicing in their common hostility to the national government made the geographer a local being, and we hardly had in our country a man who knew as much about the lines of nature in the United States as he did about the depth of the gulf stream. Nearly all our fine ability in the navy had been turned to sounding the coasts and following Humbolt and others in their natural researches. It cost blood to define the true line of the United States, and therefore we know our country now by the skeleton hands starting from the ground to impress upon us names, forms and places.

I can remember at school, when I was a little chap, that we had to sing geography. We sung with all our mights in chorus the names and lengths of rivers, the names and populations of towns, the names and heights of mountains. It was a great performance at school; it sharpened the eye, expanded the lungs, and gave to many of us the only geographical knowledge we ever have received.

So the huge civil war was merely a singing of geography; the singing was somewhat appalling in its tone and variations: sometimes it was the bursting of a shell, again the roaring of volleys, again the cannonade between great gunboats and intrenched forts, then the shriek of the wounded, the yell of the rebel and the cheer of the Union, but it was singing geography all the time.

John Adams and His Latin.

[Exchange.]

John Adams, the second president of the United States, used to relate the following anecdote:

"When I was a boy I used to study the Latin grammar; but it was dull, and I hated it. My father was anxious to send me to college, and therefore I studied the grammar till I could bear it no longer; and, going to my father, I told him I did not like to study, and asked for some other employment. It was opposing his wishes, and he was quick in his answer. 'Well, John, if Latin grammar does not suit you, you may try ditching; perhaps that will. My meadow, yonder, needs a ditch, and you may put by Latin, and try that.'"

"This seemed a delightful change, and to the meadow I went. But I soon found ditching harder than Latin, and the first forenoon was the longest I had ever experienced. That day I ate the bread of labor, and right glad was I when night came on. That night I made some comparisons between Latin and ditching, but said not a word about it. I dug next forenoon, and wanted to return to Latin at dinner; but it was humiliating, and I could not do it. At night toil conquered pride; and though it was one of the severest trials I ever had in my life, I told my father, that if he choose, I would go back to Latin grammar. He was glad of it: and if I [illegible]e since gained any distinction it has [illegible]n owing to two days' labor in that [illegible]ominable ditch."

The Indian War Whoop.

[Winnipeg Sun.]

Among the penitentiary inmates at [illegible]ney Mountain is an Indian, who the [illegible]er day was enjoying a quiet walk, [illegible]d doubtless contemplating the days [illegible]en he was free to wander untrammeled through the wild woods. In [illegible]sing a certain spot, near which [illegible]e of the convicts were splitting [illegible]d, he was struck on the head by a [illegible] stick, thrown with considerable [illegible]e. Instantly the demeanor of the Indian was changed, and the worst elements of his nature aroused. He was no longer the quiet thinker, the subdued and peaceful inmate of Warden Pedson's institution. In a few moments the whole man was changed, and, with a bound toward the convict who had so carelessly struck him, he gave voice to a war-whoop which sent a thrill of terror through the hearts of the bravest. In a moment the Indian had his victim in a deadly embrace, and was getting satisfaction when the interference of the guards effectually prevented him from proceeding further in his designs.

A Land of Large Hats.

[Chicago Herald.]

Corea has been said to be a land of large hats, but this does not tell everything. One would hardly expect the following dimensions from this statement alone: At Phyoung-Yank, a large and historical town near the west coast, the hats worn by the poor women are baskets 3½ feet long, 2½ feet wide, 2½ feet deep, which conceal their faces as effectually as the white cloak worn by women of a better class over their heads. The men wear a hat of the same shape, but somewhat smaller. It, however, requires the use of both hands to keep it in place.

Getting the Color of Stars.

[Cleveland Leader.]

The new instrument called the almucantar was invented by Professor Chandler, and in it the telescope floats as in a bath of mercury, and its use is in correcting or verifying observations. The special work accomplished with it this year has consisted in the photometric observations of the satellites of Jupiter, the revision of zone observations, the measurment of the light of stars to obtain magnitudes, the computation of the orbits of comets, the observations of the color of stars, and of the stellar spectra.

Niagara Enterprise.

[Philadelphia Call.]

Niagara Falls Visitor—What are all these things you are putting up?

Enterprising Native—They are toll gates.

"Toll gates! Why, they are scattered in all directions, and are close to houses."

"Yes. That's so, it will be handy to run out and take toll."

"But there is no road through them."

"No, we'll build the road afterwards."

Read the Postscript.

[Chicago Living Church.]

A clergyman who preached for a friend surprised his audience and himself by reading at the end of the usual notices: "I insist on you dining at my house, no matter who invites you."

Breaking in a New Telegrapher.

[New York Mail and Express.]

"About my first work was in Cincinnati, in the same office with Edison," remarked a well known telegrapher. "I was fresh, then, and the fellows laid for me. One night I was just through, when some one called me. 'Hello! Who is that?' I asked. 'Pittsburg. Get ready to take a lot of press matter,' was the reply.

"I guess there were fifteen instruments in the room, and every one was busy sending or receiving. I could take pretty well even then, but I never had such a hot wire before or since. I was a whole sentence behind copying by the time the first 100 words were in. I broke to catch up. The sender wanted to know what was the matter and when I was up I told him I had been getting more blanks. He started off harder than before. He wasn't sending less than fifty words a minute, and it seemed to me nearer seventy. I broke again and he began to get mad. I said I was putting in a new pen. He swore and fired away. I broke every half minute, sometimes oftener. By the time I had received 600 or 700 words we were both fighting mad. I swore that he wasn't sending plain. He maintained that he was, and finally, after a dozen breaks in almost as few words, he got furious.

"Tell the operator to come there. You'd better try shoemakin', he said.

"I didn't like to give up, but at last I turned around and asked for somebody to relieve me. You never saw a busier crowd. I kept on the best I could, the Pittsburg fellow keeping up an incessant growl all the time. He wanted me to get a messenger, or a brakeman on a freight train, or the janitor to take my place. I had taken 1,500 words before he let up.

"'Sig,' said I.

"'R,' he answered.

"The boys howled. It was Edison's signature. He had switched on a test instrument and had sent me a column from one of the afternoon papers. He had not been twenty feet away from me, but of course I did not notice that a person in the same room was sending the dispatch, because there was so many tickers going all around me."

Col. Shoemaker's Load of Coal.

[New York Financial Journal.]

Col. George Shoemaker, great uncle of Henry F. Shoemaker, of Wall street, brought the first anthracite coal to Philadelphia. He hauled a load by wagon, which he had broken from a protruding mass on his lands near Pottsville, ninety miles distant. People who immigrated from England and Wales knew that bituminous coal was combustible, but the anthracite was nothing but rock to them or the other inhabitants of the country where it abounded. If any one had tried to burn it success had not attended the effort for lack of a knowledge of drafts. Col. Shoemaker had discovered that if air could pass through the anthracite from beneath it would burn. He took his load to a factory where fuel was required and expatiated on its properties. A forbidding look settled on the crowd that gathered around him, and the feeling finally broke in murmurs.

"He is an imposter," the men surrounding him cried out. "Those black stones will not burn."

The sentiment against Col. Shoemaker increased to such an extent that he was obliged to hide his coal in a cellar and leave the city. After he was gone a blacksmith put some of the black stones on the top of his fire, but they would not ignite. He did not rake them off when he went to his midday meal, and by chance he left an opening under the forge unclosed. The draft that was created caused the stones to take fire, and when the blacksmith came back they were all aglow. The Shoemakers continued to mine coal and manufacture iron until they sold out their interests to the Philadelphia & Reading Railroad company.

Sensible War Talk.

[Pall Mall Gazette.]

We are not a gang of cutthroats, with the morality of thugs—whatever The Times may believe; and we are not going to spend 300,000,000 pounds sterling and kill 300,000 human beings over a pettifogging wrangle for fifty miles of uninhabited steppe, over which but for the order established by Russia no human being dare wander. Apart from all questions of morality, we are not going to rush into a war which at the very best could do us no good when it can be honorably and satisfactorily avoided by referring the dispute to arbitration.

Russia and England are linked together by destiny for better or for worse. They have got to keep common house in Asia, and nothing that either of us can do can turn the other out of doors. Divorce is impossible, and, as we cannot kill our Russian partner, we had much better try to get on with him as best we can by treating him reasonably. The solution of the central Asian question can only be found in an Anglo-Russian alliance; it will only be rendered infinitely more costly and difficult by an Anglo-Russian war.

Two Statements.

[James Freeman Clarke.]

I read yesterday, two statements: one was that there is a scythe factory in New England which turns out 14,000 dozen scythes a year, and the president of the company tempers all the scythes that leaves his works, because no other man can do it so well. The other fact stated is that there is another man so famous for making knife-blades that a knife with a blade of his workmanship is double in value. These facts illustrate my thesis that we must put our whole mind into our work in order to do it well; the active human intellect being superior to all machinery, all mere training and all mechanical habit. Genius and talent are nothing without application, and application means putting mind into work.

Had Forgotten Her Specks.

[Chicago Ledger.]

Man on steamboat collecting autographs of passengers, hands the book to an old lady with a request for hers.

"Sis, you write mine for me, won't you? I've left my specks in the bunk."

Growth of Children's Bones.

Children grow taller, it is said, during an acute sickness, such as fever, the growth of the bones being stimulated by the febrile condition.

SONOMA INDEX-TRIBUNE.

P. H. CRONISE EDITOR

SATURDAY, OCTOBER 17, 1885.

SONOMA.

The interests of our citizens and their coin should be centered in Sonoma. In writing up our town, we are not only "tooting our own horn," but we speak for the well-being of all who have cast their lot with us. If we criticise, we do as does the skillful surgeon who cuts beyond the wound to make the cure complete. We would rather write words of praise than those of censure; but as we must be guided by reason and common sense, it would be an act of recreancy did the INDEX-TRIBUNE fail to labor for the general weal of the public by pointing out, when ever occasion requires, the mistaken policy of some of our people.

Sonoma has every requirement for a thrifty business and a lively town. Its situation is one of the most picturesque of all the inland towns of the State, and our climate is all that can be desired. We escape the cold fogs of San Francisco and other places on the coast and the tropical heat of the interior of the State. We have a population limited in numbers, it is true, but our people are active, industrious and hospitable. The soil of the valley is fertile and yields large returns to the husbandman. There are no failures of crops, as in other localities, and sickness and disease in an epidemic form are unknown here. With all these natural advantages we would ask what is to hinder us from building up a town noted for its enterprise and famed for its requisites as a country residence for the city merchant, as well as for the laboring man and mechanic.

Sonoma has nine general merchandising stores, four blacksmith and two harness shops, a furniture and two drug stores, a hardware establishment, one dry goods store, seven hotels, one restaurant, two cooper and three boot shops, a livery stable, barber shop, two markets, a produce and egg depot, a tailor, lumber yard, jewelry store, news depot, two real estate firms, a bank, two tinsmiths, an insurance agent, a number of first-class saloons, several wine cellars, four physicians, and a live newspaper to record matters of general interest to the public. Business and trades sufficient, we claim, to supply all the wants of the community. Yet, every day, we see our people going to San Francisco, Petaluma and Napa, and returning loaded down with bags and bundles of inferior articles, purchased at a higher cost than first-class goods of the same kind could have been bought here, to say nothing of the dusty trip and ever-wearisome journey.

Every dollar spent away from home, by even the humblest of our people, takes the bread out of their own mouths, either directly or indirectly, just as surely as the sun rises and sets. It is true that occasionally one may pick up in the above mentioned places articles from twenty-five cents to a dollar less than they may cost at home; but on other things a higher price is paid, and when it comes to figuring time and expense in going to and fro, people who go away from home to spend their money among strangers will generally find themselves out in pocket. If our people would spend their money where they get their bread and make their living, that money would circulate here and make times better. This would give confidence to men of means. New enterprises and new industries would be started, and general prosperity would be bound to ensue.

To the business man of Sonoma we would say: "When you want an article out of your line go to your neighbor that has it—not to the city—and give him the little benefit that may accrue by the sale of the same."

To the ranchman and the workingman, the capitalist and the vintner, one and all, we will repeat: "Patronize your home industries if you wish to prosper, build up the town, and be happy and content in the days to come.

THE election in Ohio last Tuesday was carried by the Republicans by a plurality of 20,000. Foraker was elected Governor and a working majority in both branches of the Legislature was secured.

A LUNATIC AT LARGE.

A roaming correspondent of the "Solano Republican," and evidently an escaped "crank" from the asylum at Napa, in a letter to that journal, after describing the workings of the above institution in all its details, which would seem to indicate that he has been an inmate of the same at some time or other, inflicts the following "hog wash" on the readers of our esteemed contemporary:

"Sonoma Valley has not changed a bit in twenty years. The old vineyards are smaller instead of larger, and the young vineyards show a great many more redwood stakes than vines. The soil of Sonoma is a gravelly clay, but mostly a dark loam in summer, and a nasty sticky adobe in winter. The fences are mostly pickets and rails, and from the moss on them, I think the Russians must have got them out of the woods in '44. I saw two ox teams which looked like they had been taking a thirty-year nap, and had just came the plains across. The orchards here are mostly apples, and some very good. I threw one at a dog in the night; result, a crippled canine. Thinking that perhaps I might be called on by the State Horticultural Society to make a report on the grapes of Sonoma, I sampled some from each vineyard near the road that did not show signs of a big dog or shotgun. I found them mostly very sour, and what were not sour had no taste of any kind. I do not wonder that the Solano grapes bring from five to ten dollars per ton more than the Napa or Sonoma grapes. I saw a few peaches, but they looked as though they were ashamed of themselves."

To those acquainted with our beautiful and productive valley, it is unnecessary for us to state that the wild and incoherent utterances in the foregoing paragraph are wide of the truth. To strangers we will say that the Sonoma Valley is one of the most celebrated grape producing sections in the State, and its wines are becoming famous for their excellence and purity. Here, owing to the condition of soil and climate, the grape and all other crops are cultivated to perfection without irrigation, and with very little labor. It is not true, as asserted by the unwell correspondent of the "Republican," that the Solano grapes bring from $5 to $10 more per ton than the Napa and Sonoma grapes, as any one who reads the newspapers can testify to. On the contrary, the Sonoma and Napa Valley grapes are much the superior article for wine-making, and the table grapes of these valleys will compare favorably with those raised anywhere else in the world.

AS IT SHOULD BE.

L. Breitenbach, recently appointed City Marshal to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of James Dyer, announces in another column that he intends to enforce all the city ordinances, and that he will show partiality to none. This is as it should be. The City Trustees make the laws governing the town, for the benefit of all alike, and it is the duty of the City Marshal to see that they are executed. Heretofore, the town ordinances have been but partially enforced, much to our detriment. But our new Marshal, we should judge by his announcement, intends to do his duty without fear or favor. This being so, he should be sustained and encouraged by all citizens having the welfare of the community at heart.

THE wines forwarded to the Louisville Exposition by the vintners of Glen Ellen, are attracting marked attention. A number of experts have tasted the Rieslings and Gutadels of the exhibit and have expressed themselves as surprised at their excellence.

THE "Pacific Sentinel," published at Cloverdale by Frank K. Merritt, formerly of this place, has suspended publication. The town was too small to sustain two papers, and in consequence one of the two had to go by the board.

HENRY HARRIS, son of the well-known Sacramento detective, Len Harris, was shot and fatally wounded in that city last Monday morning by Michael Zeller, a pressman on the "Record-Union." It was a drunken row.

H. W. SHAW (Josh Billings), one of the most humorous lecturers and writers of the age, died very suddenly of apoplexy at the Hotel del Monte, Monterey, at 10 o'clock on the morning of last Wednesday.

J. W. LEIGH, of the "Monterey Democrat," has been appointed by the President, Receiver of the United States Land Office at San Francisco, vice C. H. Chamberlain removed.

MOSES HELLER, a prominent merchant of San Francisco, died in that city last Tuesday. He was a native of Bavaria, aged 69 years.

THE Fruit Growers' Convention of California will hold a meeting on Tuesday, November 10th, at the Chamber of Commerce, San Francisco.

CARDINAL MCCLOSKEY died in New York last Saturday morning, aged 75 years.

A heavy shock of an earthquake aroused many of our people from their slumbers between four and five o'clock yesterday morning. The vibrations were from north to south, and lasted several seconds.

A peculiar virtue in Ayer's Sarsaparilla is, that while it cleanses and purges the blood from all corruptions and impurities, and thereby roots out disease, it invigorates the system and makes one young again.

The Rev. John Gray, rector of St. John's Episcopal Church of Petaluma, being desirous of establishing an Episcopalion Mission in Sonoma, will hold services here on the last Sunday of this month, the 25th, when all are invited to attend.

The stench arising from the sewer running along First Street West, by the Union Hotel, is almost unbearable at times. Something should be done by our City Fathers to remedy the evil, as the health of the town is greatly engendered by the same.

A heavy fall of rain took place in this section last Tuesday, commencing at 1 P. M., and continuing well on till midnight. No damage was done to the grapes still unpicked, while the dust on our streets and public roads was thoroughly laid, making traveling quite pleasant.

E. T. Sheppard has made 50,000 gallons of wine this season—35,000 gallons of red Zinfandel, the balance being Chasselas. This wine is pronounced by experts to be some of the best ever made in the Sonoma Valley. Mr. Sheppard is a painstaking viticulturist as his vineyard and wine-cellar will testify to.

"The melancholy days have come, the saddest in the year." By reference to advertisement in these columns this week, under the head of "Notice to Tax-Payers," it will be seen that the city taxes of Sonoma, are now due and payable. Unless paid prior to the 16th of November they will become delinquent and ten per cent. be added thereto. L. Breitenbach, City Collector, will receive the amount due as taxes at the office of the Union Stables on October 24th and 31st, and November 7th and 14th, between the hours of two and four o'clock, and on November 16th from 10 A. M. till 6 P. M. To avoid future trouble, our tax-payers would do well to heed this warning.

Smallpox and Vaccination.

The State Board of Health has caused to be sent out in circular form the following warning, which our people would do well to heed. There can be no excuse for our people neglecting to have their families vaccinated, as Sonoma has four physicians;

"Smallpox has not yet made any progress in this State. It is spreading in Mexico and in Canada, and has appeared in New Hampshire and New York. It also prevails in England, France, Belgium, Italy, Austria, Russia and South America, countries with which we are in constant communication by travel and otherwise. Under these circumstances we may very safely predict the advent of the disease to this coast before very long; it is therefore the act of prudence to take early warning, and prepare to render the invasion as limited as possible, and this can only be done by vaccination. It is now several years since smallpox was epidemic in California. Since then many thousands have been born, or added to the population by immigration, who have never been protected by vaccination; to these may be added those who, although vaccinated in childhood have, by reason of age, acquired a renewed susceptibility to the influence of the disease. Among these classes of persons our danger lies, as it is the unprotected that are attacked. This danger must be removed by vaccination and re-vaccination, thus depriving the disease of the source from which it obtains its victims. By so doing we can virtually stamp it out. It is a disgrace to civilization to hear of an epidemic of smallpox in this century, when the means of averting it are so accessible, so certain, and so innocuous to the individual and the community. It is to be hoped that every physician receiving this circular will see that the unvaccinated in his vicinity are protected at once, as at any moment the disease may appear in our midst, owing to the constant communication with localities where we know it exists. If every one, male and female, were efficiently vaccinated, we might be certain to escape, but should the disease now appear it would not fail to prostrate numberless persons who might have been protected from this most loathsome of all diseases had physicians done their duty in admonishing their patrons of its necessity."

An Exciting Chase.

A novel and exciting scene took place on Spain street, last Monday afternoon. A jack rabbit, pursued by almost every dog in town, with ten or fifteen small boys following up in the rear, made its appearance at the upper end of that thoroughfare. After being chased two blocks through the town, amid the yelping of the dogs and the shouting of the young street gamins, the venturesome rabbit was captured by a fleet-footed greyhound and speedily put to death. During the excitement of the chase one of our most respected citizens, forgetting for the time being that there was an ordinance in force forbidding the discharge of firearms within the city limits, banged away at the unoffending animal with a double-barreled shotgun as it rapidly passed his place of business, and paid $5 the following day for the privilege, which sum went to replenish the depleted treasury of the city.

Judgment for Plaintiffs.

The case of Elizabeth Krone and Mary Schmit vs. Bridget Williams, which has been dragging its slow length along in the Superior Court for some time, was decided in favor of plaintiffs on Friday of last week, by Judge Pressley. The suit was brought for possession of one-half of the Williams' estate, near Glen Ellen, and the Judge has ordered a partition of the property. No doubt an appeal will be taken to the Supreme Court by Mrs. Williams' lawyers.

Romance of the Nineteenth Century.

Medical science has made great advances of late, and many of its discoveries have been largely instrumental in relieving pain. Cocaine, the new anaesthetic, has done wonders in this respect, and is now used whenever delicate operations are performed. Red Star Cough Cure may also be classed among these discoveries. It contains neither morphia nor opium, and yet its effects are marvelous, and it is now in use in hospitals and curative institutions.

Immense Antlers.

Jas. A. Shaw of Glen Ellen has preserved as a trophy of his recent hunt in the wilderness of Oregon, the antlers of an immense elk which he brought down with his Winchester. The antlers have six prongs on each side, and are over five feet in length and with the head tipped the scales at 150 pounds.

Any one wishing a brand new double-barreled, breech-loading $75 shot-gun for $60, would do well to cal at this office and examine the same. *

Building improvements are going on in all parts of the valley, more so than at any time since its settlement.

SANTA ROSA NEWS.

[Daily Democrat.]

Kohlman & Co. are paying from eight to ten cents per pound for dried blackberries, and are buying all offered at this price.

Saturday morning was very cool and bracing. There was a light frost west of Santa Rosa—just enough to recognize the return of the winter visitor.

On Wednesday night, at about 9 o'clock, officer Raney found a well-dressed individual with plenty of coin, unable to take care of himself. He was given lodgings in the cooler for the night.

Joseph Thomas and William Coulter have both claimed to be the tallest men in Sonoma County. On Saturday they were measured, when Mr. Coulter proved to be just three-quarters of an inch taller than his rival.

Lester Holloway, who has been serving a sentence of six months in the County Jail, was released Wednesday on a writ of habeas corpus, on account of a defect in the commitment. J. T. Noon appeared for the defendant.

When the new bridge over Russian River at Geyserville is built, for which the contract was let on Wednesday, there will be seven bridges spanning that stream, all costly structures, of which five were built by the county.

J. N. Barbache took from an acre of land 454 boxes of grapes, weighing sixty-five pounds each—a total of 27,240 pounds, equal to about thirteen tons to the acre. The grapes are of the Berger variety. For an "off" year that is a good showing.

Marshal Blume brought from Petaluma on Wednesday George Woods and William Hosford, the former to serve a sentence of thirty days in the County Jail for disturbing the peace in the night time, the latter to serve ten days in the County Jail for the same offense.

On Tuesday a very painful accident happened to James Warner. He was loading stone into a wagon, when one of them, which he had just thrown up, tumbled back and, as he was in the act of throwing another one up, struck his hand which was mashed between the two stones. No bones were broken, but it will be some time before Mr. Warner will be able to use his hand.

On Monday morning Mr. Kennedy, who resides in Pocket Canyon, made an early start for Santa Rosa, intending to return on the same day. When he reached Pocket Canyon Creek it was still quite dark, it being 4:30 A. M. When about half way across the creek the right wheels of the wagon went over the bridge, precipitating Mr. Kennedy, wagon and team into the creek, a distance of about twelve feet. When in the act of going over, Mr. Kennedy made a fortunate spring, landing a few feet from the wagon and team. A valuable horse was killed instantly, the other one seriously hurt, and the wagon badly smashed. Having no light, quite an inconvenience was experienced in getting home and disentangling the live horse from the wreck. It was nearly noon before he got home with the wagon and the injured horse.

GLEN ELLEN ITEMS.

Jim Gibson reports a crowded house and lots of business.

Mr. Asborn of San Francisco was up last Sunday.

The Dunbar school boasts of forty scholars.

The new store is rapidly drawing to completion.

Several large fires are raging in the mountains east of this place.

A butcher shop is now talked of in this town. Undoubtedly, a real necessity.

Grape picking and wine making is nearly over and resulting in an average yield and a good article of wine.

A cloudy sky is an indication of rain. Hurry up with those grapes!

A case of assault and battery was tried before Judge Small one day last week. The defendants were found not guilty, and in consequence were discharged.

Quite a number of quail hunters came up from San Francisco last Saturday evening. On the trip homeward, Monday morning, the startling fact stares us in the face that the shooters outnumbered the quail two to one. OLD TIMER.

Belief in Miracles.

Mr. S. W. Benerman, of Philadelphia, Pa., for many years identified with the wholesale hardware business, had rheumatism in his arm, and could not dress or undress but with the most excruciating pain. He used St. Jacobs Oil, and the result, he says, was wonderful if not miraculous.

A THRILLING NARRATIVE.

The Perils of a Fireman --- Hair-Breadth Escape of Philip McMahon.

Philip McMahon, one of the men who narrowly escaped being burned to death at the Crocker fire in San Francisco last week, wherein firemen Healey and Hannon lost their lives, furnishes the "Chronicle" the following thrilling narrative of his hair-breadth escape from a similar fate:

"While we were working, the flames burst out here and there. Turning the hose wherever it was needed, we felt the floor swaying beneath us. My companion said: 'This floor won't hold up much longer.' 'No,' said I, 'but don't say anything, or it may cause a panic, and then none of us will escape.' Just then everything gave way with a crash. Hannan and Healey fell straight into the midst of the furnace with one despairing shriek. I never heard anything so horrible as that scream; it will haunt me while I live. After the cry there was a groan and nothing more. If any words had been spoken I should have heard them. The men died at once; their sufferings were shorter than mine. The floor where I was, instead of falling straight through, sank in a slope. I had time to try to save myself, and caught at a box covered with cloth. Through the cloth I could feel something round, like bottles. I hung from the box, while the flames came up from below and lapped around my feet. I cannot tell how long I held on; but at last the agony became too horrible to endure. I tried to call for somebody to turn a stream of water on me, but could hardly utter a sound. I was being slowly burned alive, and determined to end the torture. There seemed to be no hope, and I threw myself into the pit. Instead of striking the fire, I landed in some paper. Holding on to the box so long had probably saved my life, for I fell on the cases, which otherwise would have fallen on me. Still there seemed to be no chance of escape. The fire was on all sides, and I was almost too weak to move. I then wrapped my coat around my head to keep off the heat and smoke, and waited for death. Near by was an iron-barred window, like the grating of a prison cell. A man walked by and I called feebly to him, 'Can't you get a fellow out of here?' He seemed as cool as if such things were in his everyday experience, and calmly replied, 'Come to the other window and you can get out yourself.' I crawled about four feet and found an open window. When I got out I met District Engineer Sands and the Chief. They sent for a hack, but none could be found; so they got a buggy and sent me home."

SOME MOTHER'S CHILD.

BY FRANCIS L. KEELER.

At home or away, in the alley or street,
Wherever I chance in this wide world to meet
A girl that is thoughtless, or a boy that is wild,
My heart echoes softly, "'Tis some mother's child."

And when I tell those o'er whom long years have rolled
Whose hearts have grown hardened, whose spirits are cold,
Be it woman all fallen, or man all defiled,
A voice whispers sadly, "Ah! some mother's child."

No matter how far from the right she hath strayed;
No matter what inroads dishonor hath made;
No matter what elements cankered the pearl—
Though tarnished and sullied, she is some mother's girl.

No matter how wayward his footsteps have been;
No matter how deep he is sunken in sin;
No matter how low is his standard of joy—
Though guilty and loathsome, he is some mother's boy.

That head hath been pillowed on some tender breast;
That form hath been wept o'er, those lips have been pressed;
That soul hath been prayed for, in tones sweet and mild;
For her sake deal gently with—some mother's child.

CARL SPRINGEL.

Carl Springel is the name of a boy who is held in remembrance over half of Germany, for a deed of self-sacrificing heroism which is unparalleled in the legends of Greece and Rome, or in the annals of more modern chivalry. It is not so very hard for the soldier to face bullets and cannon-balls upon the battle-field, for he knows that while there are many chances of death there is still some chance for life.

On November 19, 1867, a terrible rain storm swept over Southern Germany. For twenty hours the rain poured down in such torrents as had never before been known in that region, and it seemed as if the day were to be the beginning of a second deluge. Rivers overflowed their banks and petty streams were swollen into rivers. At nine o'clock at night the storm raged on with unabated violence, when Carl Springel set out on his crutches from the hut in which he lived alone, to carry an evening repast to his parent who was on watch duty at the bridge over the "Devil's Gulch," on the Great South German Railway.

The "Devil's Gulch" is a fanciful name given to an immense cleft in the rocks, two hundred feet wide and one hundred feet deep, which had been spanned by a strong bridge of wood and iron, believed by the engineers who constructed it to be capable of withstanding all possible assaults of wind and water.

It was the duty of Wilhelm Springel—Carl's father—to keep guard at this bridge on stormy nights and warn the oncoming trains of any lurking danger which might exist.

Beneath the bridge, a mountain stream boiled and bubbled in ordinary times; on that night, the heavy rains had swollen it to a furious torrent.

Carl Springel hobbled slowly along upon his crutches through the almost Egyptian darkness of the night, half-blinded by the rain, but buoyed up by the thought that he was bringing cheer and comfort to his beloved father.

When within a hundred yards of the bridge, an awful crash sounded but upon the night air loud above the din of the storm, and a shudder of horror ran through his brave young soul.

It was the bridge—the bridge which had been deemed impregnable. The bridge had succumbed to the fury of the water, which rushed down upon its foundations in irresistible torrents from the mountain-side.

Hurrying on as fast as he could, Carl reached the railroad track, and his worst fears were realized. Upon the track, some ten feet away from where the entrance of the bridge had been, was his father's hand-car, with his red lantern burning dimly in it, and by the lantern's light Carl could see the full extent of the disaster. Every section, every timber of the bridge had been swept away, and the yawning gulf and the roaring flood were all that were left.

"Father, father!" cried Carl, in his loudest tones. "Father, father," he called again, "where are you?"

But no answering voice responded, and there rushed across his brain the terrible certainty that his father had gone down with the bridge.

For a moment his breast was filled with unutterable anguish. But it was only for a moment. Quick as thought, it flashed upon his mind that it was almost time for the last night train from the great city above to come rushing along with its living freight.

No danger-signal gleamed from the watch tower upon the bridge, and on they would come, unsuspicious of their peril until it would be too late, and they would be dashed in a moment into the seething flood, more than a hundred feet below.

What was to be done? Forgetting for an instant the great woe that had befallen him, Carl decided at once that it was his duty to supply his father's place, and warn the train of its peril in time to save it, if possible. But what could he do?

The tempest increased in its fury, and the rain poured down as though it would never stop. Hark, the train is coming! Already he hears it rumbling on toward destruction, and it must be near or he could not hear it above the storm.

He cannot run with his poor, crippled legs, so he threw himself upon the hand-car, and nerved himself for a mighty effort.

As though his own life were at stake, he begins to turn. Slowly at first, then faster and faster, he drives the car in the direction of the approaching train.

On, on, dashes the mighty iron-horse; nearer and near it comes. Oh, if he can only warn them while there is yet time to stop the train! If only he can get far enough off to save the train from rushing headlong into that terrible grave!

Around the mountain side, on the curving track, the train speeds along. The gleam of its light is now shed upon the valley, and the boy knows that the supreme moment is at hand.

On thunders the engine, and the track trembles beneath the heavy burden. Suddenly around a sharp bend a hundred feet away, full on his sight bursts the blazing headlight of the engine.

Ceasing from his labor, Carl Springel braces himself with one hand, and grasping the lantern in the other, swings it wildly above his head.

"The bridge is down! The bridge is down!" he cries with all his power. "The bridge is down! The bridge is do—"

The engineer has seen him but cannot save him. With a dull thud, the engine clears the obstruction from the track and dashes along—but slower and slower now.

The hand-car and the boy are hurled fifty feet through the air, and when the boy is found his body is crushed mangled and lifeless. But the train is saved. Trembling, gasping, staggering, the engine halts—halts not a dozen yards from the mouth of the yawning chasm—and all on board are saved. Saved by the unparalleled heroism of this crippled boy who has given up his life that they may live.

Two years ago, in a quiet village cemetery in the south of Germany, I saw the grave in which he sleeps. Upon a modest tombstone at its head, erected by the gratitude of those whose lives he had preserved, is this inscription:

"CARL SPRINGEL,
"AGED 14.
"He died the death of a hero and martyr, and saved two hundred lives."

A hero and martyr he was indeed, and sometime yet bards and poets will sing the story of this brave young peasant boy of Germany.

Dr. J. Winchester, Columbia, Cal., says: "Have used Vita Oil with the most beneficial results; can endorse without hesitation your claim. As a family remedy for the relief of pain it has no equal in the world. In our household it has become indispensable."

"With a thankful heart I acknowledge the great merit of Dr. Smith's Caloric Vita Oil. I had suffered over 30 years with Bronchitis and was seriously threatened with lung disease. I had tried all remedies and all climates with occasional temporary relief, but no cure. The use of two small bottles made me a sound man.

"A BANK OFFICER."

A prominent druggist in San Francisco:—"We hazard nothing in saying it is the best pain curer and healing remedy ever used or known. It acts quickly, promptly and certainly in relieving pain. Hundreds of sufferers have been relieved by it, to the wonder of thousands of their friends. Its sales have doubled nearly every month."

"It will do the heaviest work of any medicine I ever handled, and quick, too."
